Dr. Cave Leaves
Frankfort For New Location in Tenn.

Dr. W. H. Cave who has been associated with the Hedges Clinic in Frankfort since June, 1948 has severed his connections there and moved to Kingsport, Tenn. Dr. Cave has made this move necessary. He will do limited surgery in the hospital in that city and have a limited practice. In that way he will be able to recover his health.

Suffering from a kidney infection, Dr. Cave took a prolonged vacation during the winter and felt much improved in health after that rest. Returning to his practice at the clinic again, he finally found that his health would not allow him to maintain the heavy practice which he formerly did. Therefore, with much reluctance on the part of all concerned, he severed his connections at the clinic and the partnership between him and Dr. Claude Otto has been dissolved.

Dr. and Mrs. Cave and their family moved Monday to Kingsport, Tenn., which is the home of Mrs. Cave's mother and family, and where Dr. Cave is also well known having been in that city much during the time he attended medical school in Nashville.

Their many friends in this locality wish them much success and happiness in their new home.

Two new physicians and surgeon will join the clinic in the next month or two.

Industrial showmanship on a giant scale—that's General Motors' Motorama, which opened Friday to a special preview for an invited audience of press and business representatives, including auto dealers from every part of the Midwest.

It has been shown in Miami, Los Angeles and San Francisco before making its Chicago debut.

Mrs. Margaret Semmler, publisher of the Semmler newspapers, was among those attending a luncheon given Thursday by GM president Harlow H. Curtice, in the Crystal ballroom of the Blackstone hotel in Chicago. In the receiving line with him was GM vice president Goad, and among the guests were presidents, engineers and personnel directors of Chevrolet, Buick, Oldsmobile and Frigidaire and advertising agencies' top men.

"One and one-half million people have seen the Motorama," President Curtice said.

He explained the 1954 outlook for business in general, and that there is little support for the pessimistic talk going around. The rise in unemployment has been halted, he declared, adding that people gave too little attention to the figure of 57 millions employed in 1950. It is now at its best level ever attained in this country at this quarter, except for last year.

Consumer spending has been maintained, said Curtice. Goods have been consumed at a faster rate and the total construction in the first quarter made a new record. Industry and commercial construction were up seven per cent.

"All indications are that the nation is readjusting to a period of unusual prosperity."

The biggest single factor in the first quarter in the automobile industry, he said, is that General Motors reports business good with 5,393 employed at Detroit.

"The retail of passenger cars is ahead of last year. It is going to be another good year in the auto industry, and the third highest for business in general. Business is going to improve as the year progresses."

"We have estimated that 640,000 passenger cars will be sold in 1954," Mr. Curtice said. He had prophesied last Fall in Chicago and again in January, that business was going to be good, and that proved to be right.

Tells of Motorama

Features of the Motorama discussed by the GM president were the panoramic windshield of the Chevrolet Corvair, which he said is finding high favor with auto buyers, and a great step forward in automobile design, the "Firebird," which he said is "not for highways."

The "dream kitchen" was cited as a radical step forward from older kitchens, even from the nice modern ones of today.

At the press preview on Friday, the center of attention in the great hall of the amphitheater was the Firebird XP-21 newest experimental car powered by a gas turbine. It is the first of its type ever built and tested in this country, a 370 horsepower single-seater built by GM to study the possibilities of gas turbines for commercial uses, GM engineers explained.

The famous GM hospitality was in evidence everywhere as waiters bore loaded trays of hors d'oeuvres, little cakes and other tidbits.

The Doctor school PTA meeting was held April 22 in the school house. Reports were given en by Mrs. Rieva Doolin and Mrs. Vivian Shoop. The latter reported on the blackout curtains for the school. Doctor school will graduate 13 boys and girls this year. It was voted to buy each one a gift as has been done in previous years. Mrs. Donald Maue showed a movie, "Indians in the Everglades." Hostesses were Mrs. Harold Steger Mrs. Frank Harris and Mrs. Jere Vanek.

The square dance held in the Orland Park gym sponsored by Doctor school was very well attended and the children enjoyed doing the bunny hop. We enjoyed hearing from Maue school Mrs. Chester Henning, Mr. and Mrs. Blank and Mr. and Mrs. Knierim.

The report makes it clear that most of last year's accidents need not have happened. Most of them were caused by drives and pedestrians who could have prevented the circumstances which led them to disaster.

OIL CO-OP BRINGS IN BIG PRODUCER

PRATT Kans. - Consumers Co-operative Association brought in its biggest oil well in three years here. It's 4,300 feet deep with an estimated lifetime capacity of 225,000 barrels of crude oil. CCA which has its headquarters in Kansas City, owns 1,000 wells in four states.

For the past several weeks much has been written about the so called "New Look" in our national defense planning. Ever Adlai Stevenson, former Governor of Illinois, took occasion to be critical of it, although he is not a military expert.

If anyone is an expert on national defense, that person is President Eisenhower. He spent a lifetime dealing with military matters. He served as Supreme Commander of all Allied Forces during the last war. His subsequent assignments, even to this day as President of the United States, have brought to him an intimate knowledge of defense and diplomacy hardly any other man can possibly have.

It was President Eisenhower with his training, experience and general background, who in consultation with defense specialists, devised this so called "New Look" in our national defense. The "New Look" defense plan is based on the premise that we will be obliged to carry a heavy preparedness program for many years. It is designed to give us the maximum defense at the smallest cost. Greater reliance is placed upon new weapons. Greater reliance is placed upon reserve power in men and equipment. Eisenhower has put into our defense planning greater elasticity that we developments, internationally may more readily adjust to new and technologically, over the long pull. That's the "New Look".

General Nathan Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, says, "The so-called New Look so widely criticized is simply planning ahead for two or three years."

With a military expert in the White House, we can safely leave our National Defense Program to Ike and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

France has been carrying on a war with the natives of Indo-China for seven years. France is tired of it and wants to get out. She wants Uncle Sam to take the load off her shoulders, and he has already done so to the extent of providing money, planes, guns, food and other war materials up 80 per cent of the total cost.

We have been inched into, or inveigled into, three wars under previous administrations during the past 40 years, and it now looks as though we will be inveigled into another one. War warnings are up in Indo-China.

We are sending planes and soldiers to take over the training. We may be taking part in the shooting before we know it. We hope and pray that we will not become involved, that Indo-China will not become another Korea for us.

BABSON SAYS—

Copyright, 1954, Publishers
Financial Bureau, Inc.

I wonder if you have noticed in the columns of your paper that another tempest is brewing between some manufacturers and the sellers of their merchandise. Cause of the blow: merchandise is being sold below fair-trade prices.

Before the war, on the Continent and especially in Southeastern Asia, nobody ever paid the asking price unless he had a hole in his head. At that time, in America, very few ever questioned the list price. Today, in increasing numbers, Americans are shopping for discounts. I am convinced that this movement is largely encouraged by returning soldiers from abroad. After their experiences both in foreign countries and in their cantines here at home, it is very difficult to get them to pay list prices anywhere.

On the other hand, courts of the States having "Fair Trade" laws have upheld the legality of such laws. Recently, the Supreme Court of the United States has favored the "fixed price" manufacturers. However, the final decision lies with consumers, not with the courts. Remember what happened to all the oleomargarine legislation.

Price fixing, some manufacturers say, is necessary in order to get the widest possible distribution. The argument here is that if a company's product is being undersold by a price cutter, the legitimate dealer will give up that line of goods, distribution outlets will shrink, and workers will be out of a job. For this reason, these companies say the time has come for them to spend money on lawyers, as well as on advertising. They are ready to spend plenty to curb price cutting of "fair traded" merchandise. My sympathies go out to them.

There is little question that profit margins in some industries are slim. Let's admit it though—the profit take in other industries is fabulous, and word has gotten around. How? Via consumer economics courses in public schools and colleges, consumers' buying magazines, and by word of mouth.

It is my belief that price fixing won't solve our price problems any more than Government regulation. This once seemed an easy solution to the problem. Fair trading and insistence upon maintaining a price level may help keep the inefficient businessman in business a little longer. In the long run, however, it may only prolong the day of judgment.

Newton's Law of Action and Reaction is a powerful natural law which cannot be legislated out of existence. Economic periods of adjustment are not just accidents. Such periods usually develop out of excesses practiced during boom conditions. Businessmen become too bullish; they may misjudge the future; they overestimate their markets and the size of the consumer's pocketbook. So when demand slackens, a reaction sets in and somebody cuts prices to move some stuff.

This is a perfectly reasonable course of behavior, and it may be good for our economy because it shakes out some of the deadwood, sharpens production efficiency, activates consumer research, improves quality, makes management more conscious, and forces it to reappraise its pricing policies. I forecast that neither legislation, nor a stiff necked policy, nor court action will outwit the laws of Supply and Demand, Action and Reaction.

Perhaps the time has come for a reappraisal of profit margins. Don't get me wrong. I believe in the profit system. A profitless volume, like a profitless prosperity, will get us nowhere. What I want to point out, however, is that Fair Trade laws or price cutting are not the real problem. These are symptoms of our basic difficulty. What needs to be cured is not the symptom but the problem. Let's get on with solving the problem of more efficient and more honest management.

World Observes Arbor Days Started in 1872

Arbor Day, when man pays homage to trees, is 82 years old this month. It was born April 11, 1872, in the state then known as "treeless Nebraska". Plan, date and name for the holiday came from J. Sterling Morton, later Secretary of Agriculture. More than 1,000,000 trees were planted across the wind-swept prairie for the occasion.

Other states were quick to adopt the idea, according to tree expert Martin L. Davey Jr. And today every state has an Arbor Day.

The North generally observes the holiday in April or May. In the South, it occurs often in winter.

Other lands also have picked up the idea. Special tree planting days are celebrated in Canada, England, Australia, New Zealand, France, Spain, Norway, Germany, South Africa, Japan, China and even behind the leafy curtain in Russia.

But this country is the only one that has used the day as the theme for a postage stamp. In 1932, a special Arbor Day commemorative stamp was issued showing a boy and girl planting a sapling.

Peach Crop of 750,000 Bu. Expected

The 1954 commercial peach crop in Illinois will probably total 750,000 bushels, the same as last year, according to Harold Kaeser, general manager of the Illinois Fruit Growers Exchange.

"There has been very little freeze damage so far when the crop as a whole is considered," Kaeser reports.

Kaeser says the volume will depend on moisture received between now and harvest. He adds that the Centralia area is in greater need of moisture than the area around Carbondale and farther south.
